

ON THE GROUND

- The Sportmuseum is in the west of Berlin in Olympia Park, at the former Reich Sports Grounds.
- Its collection of exhibits from sports history is one of the most extensive and diverse in Germany.
- The new permanent exhibition in the Maifeld stands is currently in development: Sports. A moving history of Berlin.

IN THE WATER

- The Wassersportmuseum Grünau is in the southeast of Berlin.
- It was originally the private collection of the teacher and oarsman Werner Philipp (b. 1933), begun in 1980.
- In summer 2024, the new museum and permanent exhibition Water Sports Grünau will open at the historic regatta viewing stands.

DIVERSIFY THE HISTORY OF SPORTS

Narrate - Preserve - Remember

in cooperation with:

Is the history of sports about emancipation and empowerment?

Is it a history of exclusion or of participation?

What was the importance of sport to past societies, and what does it mean for us today?

What can a sports museum collect and conserve? What should it?

How can we represent all groups and their histories?

DIVERSIFY THE HISTORY OF SPORTS

Sports mean something different to each of us. The Sportmuseum Berlin aims to mirror that diversity in its collection and in its exhibitions. Which object best represents your relationship with sports? Which object connects you to your athletic experiences? What history is for you forever contained within that object?

We want to share and preserve memories, create community, and provide a space for the voices of all fans and athletes.

Sport is about bodies. Bodies are diverse. The Sportmuseum Berlin is committed to reflecting this diversity.

Since the 1980s, in all German-speaking countries and especially in Berlin, there have been more and more sports groups for queer people.
